MONTHLY REVIEW

The month of June which started very positively has ended with a negative return of -3.8% for Lierde. The call for snap elections in France has caused volatility and weakness in French companies where we have 17.2% allocation. The correction of stock markets since the announcement of elections in France has been -3% for Stoxx 600 and -10% for the French CAC and in relative terms, it has been the worst period since the invasion of Ukraine.

On the macro side, inflation continues to decline globally, and central banks continue to point to further interest rate cuts in H2, so it is normal to expect some recovery in the companies most affected by uncertainty. Once again, the economic environment seems suitable for small and cyclical companies to regain ground. However, and continuing with the trend of recent years, small and value-biased companies continue to trade with deep discount and at ridiculous valuations in some cases. It is difficult to know what factor will change this trend, but we still think that the beginning of interest rate cuts by the FED could be one of them.

On the other hand, after parliamentary elections in the United Kingdom and France, the political uncertainty will continue a few more months with the proximity of US presidential elections in November, and doubts about whether President Biden will be the Democratic candidate. The American stock market has performed very well so a pause in the climbs would be a reasonable scenario.

Regarding the portfolio, we did not make any changes during the month.
